

of Mr. M. leaves the suggestion with you, do not fail to get the Three Mile List M. L. of Charles also. Sunday morning. 15

My dear Friend

Pray forgive the trouble that I am going to give you — Will you have the goodness to inquire from Mr. Macready whether it is at all necessary that I should see him to hear from him himself his suggestions respecting Master Keanie, & talk them over with him, or whether they are such as may be transmitted through you — If he wishes to see me will you have the goodness to appoint a morning the end of this week, or next week or whenever suits him that I may wait on him at Hampstead for that purpose — & first let me know by one line when to come up. Pray may forgive this trouble — But you know there good cause to fear Mr. Macready's leaving London without letting us know & the time is drawing on.
— Or if you think it necessary for any other of my literary affairs has come up — I had better not of course — but still my dear father is now so well recovered (though still very weak) that I can leave him without fear — & as I shoud sleep at the decent Inn where the Coach puts up & only stay one day, there woud be very little expence or inconveniencie in the journey.

The more I beseech you to pardon me this late the trouble I have given you — kind regards from all — You much gratefully yours Mr. A. S. T.
